

Developing the Ward Sister or Department Manager

A practical guide to strengthening the skills needed for this role

Wednesday 14th November 2018, Austin Court, Birmingham

“ While the overall leadership culture of the trust is important, often it is the local ward leadership, medical as well as nursing, that is critical to achieving high-quality care. ”

State of Care in Acute Hospitals,
Care Quality Commission,
March 2017

“ Excellent day – motivating and challenging ”

Totally inspiring

Really enjoyed the day and have taken a lot from it – will definitely recommend to colleagues

I found the day motivational and inspiring. A great opportunity to reflect on my role

A very informative day, great for sharing experiences and ideas

Developing the Ward Sister or Department Manager

Wednesday 14th November 2018, Austin Court, Birmingham

Ward sisters are central to achieving high standards, competence and a caring culture. However, for years the development of nurses in this vital role has been neglected and many nurses have made the transition to ward sister through a process of trial and error.

“While the overall leadership culture of the trust is important, often it is the local ward leadership, medical as well as nursing, that is critical to achieving high-quality care.” State of Care in Acute Hospitals, Care Quality Commission, 2nd March 2017

Whether you are currently a Ward sister, or aspiring to be one, this event provides a unique opportunity to learn from the experiences of other Ward sister's and Nurse Directors to develop your skills as an effective Ward sister. Through national updates and practical case studies the conference will update Ward sisters on essential issues to enable you to improve practice and leadership at a local level.

This conference is suitable for current and aspiring Ward Sisters/Charge Nurses and Senior Nurses

This conference will enable you to:

- Network with Ward sisters, Aspiring Ward sisters and those who support them
- Develop your skills as an Effective Ward sister
- Improve your leadership skills and empower others
- Improving communication skills at ward level including frontline management of complaints, feedback and concerns
- Learn from experienced Ward sisters about how they handle difficult issues, manage workload and work life balance and improve the way they work
- Develop your local strategy to improve and change the way you think about patient experience

The role of the ward sister/charge nurse has been highlighted as one of the most important in the NHS (Sprinks, 2010), particularly in relation to change management, vision and role modelling, and providing developmental opportunities for more junior staff; the ward sister as the “linchpin” of the clinical area, drawing together patient safety, experience and the coordination of the multidisciplinary team. The role is fundamental to ensuring high standards of care are achieved and maintained, and that patients’ experiences are optimised (Royal College of Nursing, 2009).

Ward sisters are the public face of hospitals, and represent a level of management, authority and leadership to patients (RCN, 2011). They are also role models and advisers to both nursing and multidisciplinary teams (Department of Health, 2008).

Other issues that will be addressed include:

- Team leadership and performance management
- The ward sister's business checklist – staff, patient care, patient experience
- Motivation, coaching, resilience
- Managing finances, budgets and complaints
- Putting complaints to bed – Making patients happier earlier
- Creating a culture that determines the morale of the team
- Preparing for CQC inspections
- Ensuring effective staffing and skill mixes
- Working as a team
- Moving from a failing ward to an award winning ward – how did we do it?
- Case study: Running an efficient ward
- Case study: Going into a struggling team – how to survive and thrive
- Case Study: The ward manager experience
