

Comparing Hospital Medicines Use:

A tool to improve productivity,
governance and performance

Thursday 11th March 2010,
Austin Court, Birmingham

Comparing Hospital Medicines Use:

PACT data has been used in primary care for a number of years to improve both the quality and cost effectiveness of G.P. prescribing. More recently the DH has sought to further improve prescribing performance through Better Care Better Value indicators. Individual hospitals have detailed information on medicines use, but to date no such tools exist for comparing medicines used across secondary care.

Given pressure on NHS budgets over the period 2011-14 it is imperative to ensure medicines are used in the most cost effective way possible across the whole NHS. The DH has recently secured a new PPRS agreement, established NICE, funded support for good prescribing practice, and implemented robust systems for monitoring prescribing activity in primary care. Since hospital prescribing currently accounts for approximately 30% of all NHS medicines expenditure and is said to influence 40% of primary care drug expenditure, usage of medicines in this sector will come under increasing scrutiny.

This one day conference provides an opportunity for delegates to learn of some of the initiatives being taken using comparative hospital medicines use data to improve NHS productivity.

Issues to be covered include:-

- NHS funding challenge over the period 2011-14
- The potential of better use of hospital medicines to improve NHS productivity and efficiency
- Experience of primary care in improving medicines management
- The challenge of comparing medicines use in hospitals
- Can a currency be developed for comparing hospital medicines use similar to PACT?

- The Scottish experience in monitoring and comparing medicines use between hospitals
- Comparing hospital uptake of NICE approved oncologicals
- How comparisons in hospital medicines use have been used to effect change, examine impact on primary care and identify

The day is a must for commissioners and providers looking to maximise efficiency and productivity from medicines use in the NHS including:-

- Hospital and PCT Trust Chief Executives, Finance Directors performance managers
- Hospital Chief Pharmacists and PCT Heads of Medicines Management

The day is also of importance to the Pharmaceutical Industry in understanding NHS thinking in maximising opportunities from comparing hospital medicines use and ensuring appropriate product use.

A comprehensive exhibition will run throughout the day.
